

*In a world that seems deaf to the needs of others,
35 storytellers show us that kindness matters.
Prominent leaders demonstrate that compassion is a superpower.*

Empathy and Compassion are always in style.

Style comes from the inside out. Each of us has special ways of relating to others, connecting with a smile or gesture. This has nothing to do with how much money or fame we have. It has to do with the openness of our souls, our willingness to be curious about people and our ability to give something of ourselves.

We are especially happy when our shoes “fit” our values and our personalities, at the same time supporting our relationships and work in the world.

Customizing our fit is a work in progress, a matter of daily gratitude and of seeing our own fortune—not judging—despite the difficulties that we may have.

With gratitude and an open heart, we can truly walk in another’s shoes and make this world a better place. We can follow the path of empathy and compassion to help create a healthier society and save this planet.
